Overview

The Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA) and other national initiatives are expanding the definition of college and career readiness and calling for local school systems to craft a broader and more inspiring definition for student success.

Measuring student success requires moving beyond standardized test scores toward a multi-dimensional and personalized set of indicators that collectively capture a more modern definition of readiness.

The ECRA Personalized Learner Profile paints a portrait of a student against a backdrop of a student's interests, motivations, goals and aspirations. It combines learning indicators across a range of constructs, allowing school districts to build applications of personalized learning consistent with the district's strategic plan and priorities of the community.

Personal Statement

I learn best in group settings where we can work collaboratively as a group and really listen to each other and learn from others' ideas. I find Math the most interesting and I plan to go to college and study computer engineering. In my free time, I like playing video games, hanging out with my friends, and playing soccer.
